WaterSense Specification for Showerheads

What is the WaterSense Specifications for Showerheads?

The WaterSense specification applies to showerheads that have a maximum flow rate of 2.0 gallons per minute (gpm) or less. This represents a 20 percent reduction in showerhead flow rate over the current federal standard of 2.5 gpm, as specified by the Energy Policy Act of 1992.

In addition to the water-efficiency criteria, WaterSense labeled showerheads must meet three key performance attributes that were identified through consumer testing: flow rate across a range of pressures, spray force, and spray coverage. These requirements are designed to ensure a high level of performance and user satisfaction with high-efficiency showerheads.

How much water will WaterSense labeled showerheads save my household?

By installing high-efficiency showerheads, the average household could save more than 2,300 gallons per year. Since these water savings will reduce demands on water heaters, households will also save energy. In fact, a household could save 300 kilowatt hours annually, enough electricity to power its television use for about a year.
